

Moonlight

by drake Thursday, Apr 23 2020, 7:52am international / poetry / post the passive reflected light of the moon is enough in its fullness to illumine my favorite clearing in the bush, its soft young grass is an anomaly in the rough scrub so i relax and wait knowing that the silver will not be wasted tonight

soon enuff i hear the rustling as she approaches hungry for my love or for the Love independently of me tho the Love is enuff for all, i have never considered myself something other, special, tho most consider me otherwise she breaks into the small clearing smiling, eager and ever so young and vital, I 've been too long without it, bloody boilers only drain u and return zero she snuggles next to me purring like a tiger, what else is hidden in this special delight?

it is for me alone to discover on this platinum moonlit night