

Interrupted Rapture

by jess Friday, Feb 28 2014, 12:28pm international / poetry / post

(for doren)

i watch u
appearing and disappearing in my mind
creating and destroying everything nothing escapes
as u/we move
together

u look and see something that is not me
and i return the mis-interpretation yet we find comfort in each other's arms

u have no problem
with my mode of expression treating all words equally like a painter his palette a refreshing change from dropping the c-u-n-t word

at parties and watching reactions people taking offence,
knowing it's me
they really dislike -- manner and un-conventionalities always subverting what is expected it is why we seek outside ourselves for inspiration familiarity breeds more than contempt it breeds neglect

far more devastating

but now it's different watching the process of mind creating and destroying everything transforming perceptions becoming something else entirely -- perhaps that is why we view each other as strangers

and lovers
whoever we really are

we pass thru each other
like ghosts,
an odd agreeable
sensation

i have spent an entire life un-learning everything i have learned in order to remain free but i have not been able to unlearn poetry
it sticks to me like sap, a lost spirit
desperately seeking refuge
in a safe haven
of my being or so it thinks
but it doesn't really know me

perhaps now i have earned sweet slumber
a respite from existence clicking like the tracks of a train against the steel and velvet wheels of life

whatever else is said
and done or not done
remember this one enduring reality, i love u always regardless

🔊 Telling stories - Tracy Chapman

Underground Oz Poetry. <http://ozpoetry.lingama.net/news/poem-481.html>