

Elements

by may Sunday, Mar 27 2016, 5:40am international / poetry / post seasons come and go like the pain and joy in our hearts spring and summer surrender to winter,

nothing lasts forever each moment meaningful or opportunity easily slips through our fingers the soul is not perturbed, by this flux

as love dwells there changeless amidst constant change days are replaced by night then night retreats to the brilliance of a new dawn, everything begins and ends we can't hold onto anything, such is the nature of life water, air, fire and earth, the four elements only appear constant though change is their true nature there's no holding onto anything flames burn if we get too close, water drowns if we stay under and air makes our blood red with passion how could you ever deny we are not connected we are each other we are all of this, everything we couldn't Be, without everything else the romance of life continues whether we like it or not,

it never ends
though it constantly changes, seize every moment or life will pass you by

