

Acorn

by jill via claire - Jungle Drum Newswire Wednesday, Jan 10 2018, 9:35am international / poetry / post an acorn reaches for itself to become a branching tree it returns to what its potential promised to realise itself as tree hidden within is potential growth, becoming and death yet the tree brings forth thousands of acorns could it really be said that it actually dies at some stage? no, it fulfills itself a thousand fold only when it reaches for its real self and dies to its former existence the seed must die to germinate and at every stage of growth it dies to its former existence, a tree bears no resemblance to the seed yet it was always locked secretly in the seed the red land rolls like the the sea, rocks and giant boulders move like marbles on velvet sands, the burning sky and clouds emulate the fluid ground as it turns up and meets the sky which embraces the land each dances to meet the other forming one process inside this process is another design, related -- the cosmos is reflected in a grain of sand, dimension is of no consequence in continuity, a galaxy is reflected in a sunflower and so it goes and goes forever the only aberration or flaw is clinging to an existence that must give way

to greater existence;
the only real death, finality, is not allowing yourself to die daily becoming and becoming until the Gods diminish in your presence and wherefore/what is this energy or impelling power that drives all existence?

Love

without it you are Nothing <http://jungledrum.hopto.org/news/story-3108.html>

Underground Oz Poetry. <http://ozpoetry.lingama.net/news/poem-807.html>