

The Necromancer

with the last remnants of Love removed from nations/populations we live in the realm of the Black Arts necromancers abound spreading death in a loveless world, 'it's easy' said one practitioner, the light of the world once extinguished is replaced by darkness, a blind world of blind people and human beasts hell bent on ripping out each others' throats and devouring what they imagine is the life force, blood

but it is a perversion, as blood is no more life than shit, both are products of the body and Life withdraws from bodies when bodies become uninhabitable due to perverse directions/actions how so, you may ask? Life animates matter giving the appearance that bodies are alive, does dirt live? not likely

Love's progeny is light, a guiding force which becomes matter dependent on frequency or vibration, each scale forming varieties distinct from the other yet Love is behind all creation and is inherently against death as it continues, while matter is discontinuous, it dies to one quality and becomes another within a particular sphere or realm -- each given a portion of light from which to gain sustenance when light withdraws what has previously been invigorated must necessarily die though it takes time, as the impetus derived from light's presence continues to propel matter but it must eventually die, as the world dies before blind eyes today necromancers become leaders, leading the blind to more horrors and death, they are only able to lead their own kind, which constitute the majority today and so love is lost and souls are lost to a darkness from which there is no escape

yet the few that refuse the way of death and darkness overcome, as their light is impervious to the darkness of this world -- my Arts only apply to the dead
