

Quantum Entanglements

if i split something composed to discharge two identical particles in linear opposite directions and measure the outcome it appears that the two particles are entangled or are in relationship as they arrive at the point of measurement simultaneously regardless of the distance between them -- this appears mysterious to physicists whereas the mystery is easily explained as the targets exist in a world of plurality (space/time) as does the experiment, all of which are governed by the laws of that world, our world however, all worlds and dimensions issue from a singular substrate potential which manifests as the variegated in multiple worlds/dimensions some may have taken for granted distance, time/space, which is the fundamental of measurement upon which science depends so we see that every experiment leads to a predetermined outcome whether that predetermination is known by the experimenter or not entanglement is an illusion as the relationship of one particle to the 'other' is created by the experiment, nothing more, entanglement is nothing more than one created particle appearing in two locations simultaneously as neither particle exists until measured and measurement is an illusion -- one meaning of the Sanskrit word, 'maya,' which translates as illusion, is, "to measure" do we have it now? no, obviously not, as the substrate potential has not been adequately explained a sufficient explanation is that its quality, unformulated infinite potential, is behind all manifestation, hence the illusion of two particles whereas in fact there is only one, as it issues from the substrate of all things as one -- before there was measurement, which is the progenitor of plurality/illusion there was/is only One essence of everything which appears due to desire that is why experiments always produce that which is intended by the experiment not necessarily the experimenter, which entity may be unaware of the process of production and the laws that govern it the laws of a world/dimension create that specific world which leads to the conclusion that consciousness formulates everything that exists though that consciousness is one with the substrate potential and cannot be separated from it as it issues from it, it is it!

now note that consciousness cannot be apprehended as something because it is the apprehender -- it has no plural qualities in and of itself yet it becomes every quality catalysed and created by desire in our world/dimension and every other foolish physicists attempt to comprehend that One essence from a plural world perspective in which things are produced by consciousness,

which is without quality, there is no 'spoon,' apple or orange in the pregnant world of measureless (no space/time) potential in actuality space/time measurement do not exist in Reality only in created (by mind from consciousness) dream 'realities,' plurality worlds;

mind, a cultural product, is also created in this our world, however,
is unborn, uncreated, as it is INFINITE, without beginning or end therefore measureless though its products are measurable as created illusions though 'real' within that dream the indivisible point of origin is One though not particular and remains as substrate supporting all worlds/dimensions of plurality, which as explained are nothing more than dream worlds if the process from potential to manifestation is understood then appearing in any location instantly becomes a matter of ease; in this sense moving from any location in the 'known' universe to another regardless of distance (space/time) is done instantaneously without friction as we are dealing with pure manifestation not travel through matter or energy

there is much more that could be explained but man in his present state is not qualified to know or is he capable of understanding, as he has become divorced from universal harmony due to false beliefs and aggressive discord; man must become One with universal harmony and the Infinite prior to understanding and realising its laws which are only mysterious to the ignorant
